

Great turnout at The Evasons show bodes well for CUB

Gretchen Stewart

Special to The Inkwell

On Friday, February 27th, some 60 students were astounded as Tessa Evason read their minds and told them things even they thought nobody would ever know.

A Campus Union Board (CUB) sponsored event, The Evasons show was a mind-boggling trip through Tessa's mysteriously ESP-equipped mind.

Somewhat of a skeptic, Tanya Posyton was trying to figure out how this show was rigged when she was called on and Tessa spelled out her last name.

"It was weird, I'd never met this woman before! And my name is so strange, who would be able to spell it correctly without knowing me first?" said Tanya.

The show ranged from name guessing to sitting on nails and even reached the amazing heights of levitation!

Amanda Robinson, a student, was surprised when Tessa told her the name of an aunt who had passed away, but had given her the earrings she was wearing to the show.

Three young male students had to trust Tessa as she directed them into seats that contained either an empty cup to sit on, or a cup covering a long, rather painful-looking nail.

Then four young men, using only two fingers from each hand, lifted Alexandra Iorio, a local high school student, right out of her seat on the stage!

The show involved many members of the audience, as the Evasons like to, "work the crowd," so that they can convert more people into believers.

If, however, you weren't one of those converted, not to worry!

CUB has more big events coming, including the booty-shaking local band Perpetual Groove on March 10 (7 pm, Fine Arts Auditorium) and the gut-busting comedian, Mitch Fatel, on March 25 (7 pm, MCC Cafeteria). So give your ESP-lagged mind a break and let your other parts enjoy the entertainment!